Representative David Cook Applauds Launch of ASU Prep Digital

STATE CAPITOL, PHOENIX – Representative David Cook (R-8) today applauded President Michael Crow and Arizona State University for launching ASU Prep Digital, an online educational program that supports individualized learning for students across the state.

“After many months of working with Dr. Crow’s office to expand services to rural Arizona, I am thrilled that Arizona State University is bringing additional learning opportunities to students across the state, particularly those in rural communities with limited access to education resources,” said Representative Cook. “This program is a giant leap toward equalizing educational access across all of Arizona and will make considerable progress toward ensuring all Arizona students succeed.”

ASU Prep Digital will offer support to K-12 schools in Arizona by providing a full curriculum of online courses for full or part time students, allowing access to over 100 ASU courses for credit, and assisting in design and implementation of hybrid courses and classrooms.
